“ The last of the true southern gentlemen. A man who in all things tried to elevate everyone he touched. Throughout his life my dad was someone who exemplified the win win philosophy he so often spoke of. A man who could put together self effacing humor and a regal bearing.

My first clear memories of Dad were in the summer of 1969. I was 4 and he'd just taken the training wheels off my bike. We went to the top of the small hill we lived on. After a short pep talk dad began to walk beside me holding on to the seat of the bike. As we descended the hill and picked up speed dad let go and off I went, dad yelled "You're doing just fine!" in that special encouraging dad way. Realizing I was riding my bike I turned to look back at him and wham!!! Yep, I found what I now believe to be the very distinctive rear bumper of a 1965 Grand Prix.

After a bit more dad encouragement I was back up and by the end of the day my love of two wheeled transportation had been solidified. But I think dad was still in trouble with mom.

Sitting with dad in those last few hours I had a flood of great memories come rushing back. From the first model airplane we built together to the help with shaping the derby car to a go cart that was the envy of the neighborhood for years.

Thanks dad.

“ I counted Charlie Pratt as one of my best and most loyal friends. He showed me what it means to follow Jesus Christ in daily life. I look forward to seeing him again some day on the other side of the veil. Until then, my friend, fair winds and following seas.

“ Charles was a great guy. I remember his singing voice in the choir, strong and clear. I also remember that he enjoyed some fun, like when he and Nancy showed up at a Halloween costume party wearing garbage bags with pumpkins on them. He left a good impression wherever he went, and was a distinguished cool dude. He will be missed. Hale Hawbecker
