“ In the 1990's I worked with Ward in his quest to make the latest technology affordable and available to the soldiers. I was a young engineer then and learned a lot from Ward. I remember him as a true professional and someone that was always available to teach me about the technology and answer my many questions. My condolences to the family.

“ Our condolences to you, Sharon, my cousin, to Beth and Susan, and the rest of Ward’s family. Ward was always there when you needed him. I know it has been a stressful time for all of you over the past year. I wish you the best in struggling with your loss. Remember the good times and all the astrology trips to gaze at the stars and beyond. Remember each time you look up, he is looking down on you! He will definitely be missed by all.

“ For over thirty years, I was a neighbor and co-worker of Ward at the U.S. Army's Night Vision Laboratory. During that time, I knew him not only as a good friend and neighbor but as a highly professional and accomplished physicist. His numerous publications, patents and other professional accomplishments attest to his dedication and motivation to achieve important goals. He also served as mentor to other technical personnel at Night Vision Lab. Brief comments cannot do justice to Ward's character. He will surely be missed by many.

“ Sharon and family.
Ward was such an asset to our family. Such a gentle easy going person. I know he was a great husband , father, brother, uncle and grandfather especially . He was also a dear husband to my cousin, you. Ward was so brave and courageous dealing with this disease. He handled it with great dignity and you were by his side all the way. God bless you all with comfort and peace. We will truly miss his kindness and gentle presence.

Ward was on my first team at NVL in 1979 and also a expert source and collaborator when I moved to ARO in 2000. He was a first rate scientist and a good friend for over 30 years. I'm so sorry to hear of his passing. Debbie and Lin Bourne said it very well – we will miss his kindness and gentle presence.
